

The War on the High Seas

The Crews of the British Steamships Headland and Indian City Being Towed to Port After Being Picked up by a Tug When Their Vessel Had Been Torpedoed. An Interesting Point About The German Submarine Is the High Bow of the Vessel, Enabling It to Attain a Comparatively High Speed When on the Surface. Both Vessels Were Torpedoed When Still Underway.

A Remarkable Picture of the German Submarine U-29 Taken Just as She Was About to Torpedo the British Steamship Headland off the Scilly Islands. The Photograph Was Made by Capt. Luge of the Doomed Ship Just Two Minutes Before the Torpedo Was Fired. The Crew of the Submarine Is Seen Mustered About the Conning Tower, the Captain Is Standing Alone on the Left Coolly Watching the Crew of the Doomed Ship Making Hasty Preparations to Leave the Vessel.
